Question 3 – 9: The passage below is followed by questions based on its content. Answer the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passage.

Early in the careers of most, novelists, the critics nag and carp; later, the cold eye of reassessment is cast over their life's work at the peak of a writing career, which is where Doris Lessing now stands, the years of solid achievement command maximum respect.

A survey of critical responses to Lessing's books might reveal curious strata of social history. It is hard to remember now that she was once considered very daring and very militant (she insisted that relations between the sexes were difficult and unequal). She has been accused of being a feminist, and then accused by feminists of not being a feminist enough. She has been a communist, but then moved on from a belief in simplistic political solutions to interest in deeper psychological change, touching on themes of madness and of mystical and extrasensory states of consciousness.

Lessing has written clearly into all her work the conviction that we are moving blindly and inevitably toward global catastrophe. Her message seems to be our complete moral and social bankruptcy, particularly in the relations between men and women. Hers is not an angry feminism, though her men are rather poor creatures compared to her bruised but gritty women. Anger may imply a hope that things could be better if only some sense could be knocked into somebody's head, a hope for a time "after the revolution." One does not feel that Lessing sees any hope, only perpetual deadlock.

Certainly Lessing has earned the respect accorded to a writer of her stature and productivity. Doggedly she has been writing into her fiction signposts and warnings that we need desperately to be reminded of and writing in a way that has been more persuasive and imaginative than if she had been a pure polemicist. But the critic has the problem of distinguishing between what an author says and the way, she says it. The moralist in Lessing, struggling with the very skilled writer, at times has made her writing prolix, clogged, slow though in her latest novels she has successfully introduced a leavening of fantasy. The fact is that there are writers who in an economical page or two can make us feel our dilemmas more piercingly than she does in a leisurely fictional experience. Missing from her work is that sense of time and space gathered up for a moment between the hands, that sudden shift from understanding to seeing directly, that we expect at rare moments from our storytellers.

3. According to the passage, Lessing's feminism is characterized by which of the following?

- I. A lack of concern for the well-being of males.
- II. A special emphasis upon the problems of women in professional life.
- III. A belief that antagonism between the sexes is inevitable.

(a) I only (b) III only (c) I and II only (d) I and III only (e) II and III

4. The aspect of Lessing's work most extensively discussed in the passage is its :

- (a) Pungent humor
- (b) Disarming candidness
- (c) Scrupulous scholarship
- (d) Unrelenting moralism
- (e) Feminine bias

5. According to the passage, which of the following can be attributed to Lessing's concern with warning society of its deterioration?

- (a) Recurrence of the same situations in her various writings.
- (b) A readership whose interest in her writing is more political than literary.
- (c) Concentration of the critics on her craftsmanship rather than her "message."
- (d) A tendency for her prose to be labored and verbose.
- (e) Her social and political activism.

6. The passage suggests that the author admires writers :

- (a) Whose fiction is less militant than Lessing's.
- (b) Who express greater optimism and hope than Lessing does.
- (c) Whose insights are succinctly and trenchantly developed.
- (d) Whose writings have been characterized by stylistic innovation.
- (e) Who are less dogmatic.

7. The passage implies that the author views communism as an ideology that :

- (a) Fails to accommodate the complexities of society.
- (b) Is hostile to artistic creativity.
- (c) Fosters an acute awareness of social injustice.
- (d) Is congenial to feminist concerns.
- (e) Has outlived its utility.

8. The author's attitude toward Lessing can best be described as one of :

- (a) Serious reservation
- (b) Grudging respect
- (c) Enthusiastic endorsement
- (d) Qualified admiration
- (e) Unabashed admiration.

9. The passage suggests that one reason why opinion regarding Lessing's feminism has changed is that :

- (a) The focus of her literature has changed from social issues to psychological states.
- (b) She has gradually adopted a more conservative position on the roles and rights, of women.
- (c) Feminists today find her work irrelevant to their concerns.
- (d) Her views no longer seem as revolutionary as they once did.
- (e) She remains involved with peripheral issues.
